

Itinerary:

Explore the area around Dover to learn about the important role of this part of the country throughout WW2. Picture the life of the British people who lived in 'Hellfire Corner' during this tumultuous period.

Step back in time to WW2 and see for yourself how the section of coast between Folkestone and Dover played such a vital role in defending the realm by guarding its most crucial line of defence.

After leaving the Port of Dover we first head to the poignant Battle of Britain Memorial located on the cliff top in Capel-le-Ferne. After seeing the Memorial and admiring the view over the White Cliffs, we travel to the unique Battle of Britain Museum in Hawkinge, the site of the closest airfield to occupied France during WW2. On the way to Hawkinge we drive through the seaside town of Folkestone, which played a very important role during both world wars. After our visit to the Battle of Britain Museum we drive to St Margaret's Bay, dramatically located underneath the famous White Cliffs of Dover.
